Subject: Original Afghanistan/Pakistan Work and More on PACC Website

If you have not visited the PACC's Website recently, we have been adding a great deal of original content. A few examples:

1. David Killcullen's paper on measuring success in Afghanistan:
<https://community.apan.org/pacc/b/weblog/archive/2009/12/24/killcullen-measuring-progress-in-afghanistan.aspx>
2. Tony Cordesman's analysis of civilian casualties and public perceptions:
<https://community.apan.org/pacc/b/weblog/archive/2009/12/26/cordesman-civilian-casualty-metrics-and-stratcomms.aspx>
3. Analysis of 2009 public opinion trends on the war, the military and other key subjects:
<https://community.apan.org/pacc/b/weblog/archive/2009/12/28/opinion-trends-for-2009.aspx>

We also place all of the briefing and read-ahead materials for the Pakistan Afghanistan Federation Forum there, a calendar that captures key events, Afghan/Pakistan-related papers and briefings from key academics, think tanks, and agencies and much much more. So check it out, and feel free to comment/critique what's been posted, or add original content of your own. We value your insight.

NOTE: If you have not registered for the site, information on how to do so is posted below my signature line. You can be in the site in 5 minutes!
